IT Outsourcing

Thinking of business development or running an organised business is not possible without Information Technology now days. Computer / EMAIL/Internet are integral part of business today.

If Your organisation does not have an IT Dept.? Or if your IT Dept. doesn't have all capabilities to meet your expectation from IT Infrastructure, IT Outsourcing is the best option available for you.

The Benefits of Outsourcing

Companies of all sizes struggle with escalating costs of full-time employees. Hidden behind paychecks are less visible costs. Not often considered in the decision to outsource include: hiring, training, administration, benefits, absenteeism, workspace and equipment. By some estimates, employee expenses account for up to 70% of a company's overall revenue. In addition to providing sizable financial advantages, outsourcing's other advantages are:

1. Expertise:

Harness the talent, technology and expertise of niche providers and leverage best practices. Expert sources that might carry too large a price tag to employ full-time, can fit into nearly any budget on a project-by-project or as needed basis.

2. Management:

Focus on the core aspects of your business and leave the worries of non-core activities to someone else without having to commit additional managers or your time to manage a project. Outsourcing companies have their own management.

3. Personnel Flexibility:

Hire specialists without being obligated to keep them on when they are not needed. It is easier to terminate an outsourced relationship than to layoff full-time personnel.

4. Capital Conservation:

Concentrate financial resources on core business activities vs. investing capital in overhead, such as: office space, computers, etc.

5. Time Savings:

Don't reinvent the wheel. Someone, somewhere has done it before or developed an easy solution – why not use it?
